ATTACKED WITH A DIRK.
Clerk Bartlemas' Motives Misunderstood, but He Saved the Girl.

Ningara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 5.—An enraged and excited Spaniard, with a long dirk, rushing upon the night clerk of the Cataract House was the scene on one of the floors of the hotel at an early hour yesterday morning.

The night clerk, Frank Bartlemas, had just burst open the door of the room of a very pretty Spanish girl and secured her from asphyxiation. She had blown out the gas.

The girl was Signorina Angela Figueroa, the daughter of Jose Figueroa, a wealthy Porto Rico planter, who is touring this country.

About 2 o'clock the maid in the hall on which the Spaniard's rooms opened reported that gas was escaping. Bartlemas made an investigation and located the leak in the Spanish girl's room. Every effort was made to awaken her, but without effect.

Bartlemas then put his shoulder to the door and forced it. The noise and commotion aroused the father, who had an adjoining room, and he rushed out into the hall with a large dirk knife. When he discovered his daughter's bedroom door forced and a man in her room his rage knew no bounds, and he resolved to kill the man who dared to offer this insult.

In the meantime the daughter sat up in bed in a dazed condition. Bartlemas had fled downstairs, and after the elder Figueroa had been placated and made to understand the situation, he could not do enough for the clerk.

This morning Signorina Figueroa thanked Bartlemas in the very prettiest Spanish and the father presented him with a gold-stamped check.

The girl supposed that the money had been sent by a friend acting for her mother, and she started for this country without delay. She arrived here last night with her husband, having hurriedly married before her departure from Poland. Sparodie is now seeking to recover his money.

CATHODE RAYS IN COURT.

What Promises to Be a Sensation Law Suit Began in Potsville.

Potsville, Pa., Sept. 5.—A sensational suit for $10,000 damages, in which the famous X-rays figure, was commenced in court here yesterday by Dr. D. C. Watkins, of Mahanoy City, against Miss Amy Edwards, of the same place. On the 30th of May, 1895, Miss Edwards sustained a compound fracture of the tibia, just above the ankle. The fracture was reduced by Dr. D. C. Watkins and Dr. Hannah Watkins. The injury, although a severe one, was finally healed.

When the physicians presented their bill for the treatment of the injury, they found that the patient had been treated by a man named X-ray, who had been practicing medicine in the town for some time.

The shock it caused to family relations was so keen that some members of the Watkins family are now suffering from nervous prostration as a result. It was developed that Mr. Borden had been paying assiduous court to his mother-in-law for some months, and that the two went driving and picnicking together very frequently.

Recklessness since have brought about the most unfortunate family relations among people whose high breeding and the moral tone have furnished model examples of propriety in this city for years. Mr. Borden's business partner is his brother-in-law, the son of the woman he sought to marry, and his close relations are also his intimate business associates.

The people here are not only shocked by the revelations, but because of the eminent respectability and broad charity of Borden's deceased father-in-law a great many of the more influential ones are anxious that he should go into retirement as soon as possible. The motive of such a marriage is said by some relatives to be in the fact that Mrs. Remington has some few thousands of dollars.

WARNING TO GIRL SCORCHERS.

Two of Them Fainted, and All Were Exhausted.

Denver, Col., Sept. 5.—Ladies' races have received a black eye on the West Side. The West Side road races were advertised to be in three sections, one for men, one for boys and one for ladies. In the latter there were four entries—Grace Bradley, Lulu Fox, Birdie Francis, and Claudia Strong.

The first was placed on the scratch by the handicapper, the second was given one minute, and the others allowed two minutes' start of Miss Bradley. The course was just five miles in length. Interest centered in the girls' race.

Those on the two-minute mark chased away on time. A minute later Miss Fox started and in another minute Miss Bradley. It was a race for life. The four girls rode like veterans, and when they went over the tape a blanket would have covered the entire party. Miss Fox was first. Miss Francis second. Miss Strong third, and Miss Bradley only five feet back.

As Birdie Francis crossed the tape she fell from her wheel into the arms of "Frenchy" Osborne. She was insensible, and was quickly carried into a neighboring store. Then it was found that Miss Bradley had also fainted.

The girls were so completely exhausted that more than an hour was required to get Miss Bradley so she could be removed to her home. Miss Francis recovered somewhat sooner, but not soon enough to make it possible for any more girls' races to be pulled off on the West Side.

WOMAN KEEPS TRAMP AT BAY.

She Wielded a Knife Until Assault Came.

Pemberton, N. J., Sept. 5.—A tramp stepped at the home of Allen Helling and asked for a drink of water yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Helling's husband was out in a field at work. Her little girl had just cut her foot with an ax, and she was bandaging the wound.

The tramp stood looking at her for a while, and then stepped forward, saying he was a doctor from Chicago. He took hold of the little girl, saying he had some medicine that would soon cure the sore. The little child, and the mother went to the little one's assistance.

He caught hold of her and tried to assault her. She screamed for help, and, grabbing a butcher's knife, kept the fellow away until assistance arrived. He slipped away into a cornfield, and has not been seen since, although parties have been hunting for him.

HERMIT FOR THIRTY YEARS.
John Nukel's Decomposed Body Found in a Miscrable Hut.

LOVED HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW

Fall River Merchant Tried to Wed Her.

PROCURED THE LICENSE

Then the Clerk Told Him the Marriage Would Be Illegal, as It Is Within the Prohibited Degrees of Relationship—She Is Twenty Years Older Than He.

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 5.—Charles F. Borden, aged forty-two, tried unsuccessfully to wed his mother-in-law, six or eight weeks ago, and the publication of the facts here has created a profound sensation in high social life. She is Mrs. Elizabeth A. Remington, aged sixty-three, and widow of Robert K. Remington, one of the ablest and most distinguished men of whom Fall River boasted fifteen years ago. She was a very pretty woman then, and her beauty did not begin to fade until within a few years.

Mr. Borden is the senior member of the firm of Borden & Remington, whose business in drugs and chemicals extends all through southern New England. He is a well-prospered business man, whose active life here has always been exemplary. He married Mrs. Remington's daughter Annie sixteen years ago, and they were intensely devoted to each other until a year ago, when she died after a summer home in Tiverton. She leaves him many children, of whom three are now living, the eldest a daughter twenty years old.

APPARENTLY INCONSOLEABLE.
When their mother died Mr. Borden was seemingly inconsolable, and much sympathy was extended to him by business associates and closer friends. His mother-in-law was exceedingly kind to him, and watched the children with motherly care. She spent a great deal of time with them, and her relatives frequently remarked that she seemed very fond of them.

Matters might have gone on in this way for a long time unnoticed outside of the family circle had not an occurrence on July 15 stirred up City Clerk Ballard, the oldest in office and conceded to be the sharpest municipal clerk in the State.

Ballard's assistant, Mr. Borden applied for and secured a license to marry Mrs. Remington. It was written by a junior clerk, and when he related the affair to his senior some hours afterward there was some talk hustling in the office.

By reference to the Massachusetts statutes it was seen that such a marriage would be illegal because it would be between parties within the prohibited degrees of kinship. Mr. Borden was summoned by telephone and gave up his paper. He was also informed that a marriage outside of the State would not validate conjugal living with his mother-in-law in the State, and he departed without any further talk.

SHOCKED BY REVELATIONS.
Had the town waited for Mr. Ballard to give out this bit of sensational gossip it wouldn't have heard it, but it leaked out last Saturday at a social function at Westport Harbor, where Fall River's 400 spend the summer.

The shock it caused to family relations was so keen that some members of the Remington family are now suffering from nervous prostration as a result. It was developed that Mr. Borden had been paying assiduous court to his mother-in-law for some months, and that the two went driving and picnicking together very frequently.

Recklessness since have brought about the most unfortunate family relations among people whose high breeding and the moral tone have furnished model examples of propriety in this city for years. HERMIT FOR THIRTY YEARS.
John Nukel's Decomposed Body Found in a Miscrable Hut.

New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 5.—In a miserable hut in the thick woods near Texas, Middlesex county, where he had lived a hermit's life for nearly thirty years, John Nukel was found dead Thursday afternoon.

The body, which was rapidly decomposing, was found by Ira Brown, a young man. While driving by the hut Brown noticed a stench coming from the hut, and, fearing that the old hermit might be dead, made an investigation.

Recognizing Nukel in the gloom lying upon the floor he drove to Brooklyn and told of his discovery. County Physician Samuel Leago, who conducted the inquest over the man's body today, found that his death had been caused by alcoholism. For years Nukel has been known around Texas, Brownstown and neighboring villages as "The hermit of the woods."

He was a young man when he moved into the hut where he died, and during his human life as far as possible. He had been a hard drinker for years. It is said that when a young man he was crossed in love, and with an unbalanced mind began the strange life that he lived until his death.

CHURCH IS DIVIDED.
All Caused by an Apparition of the Virgin of Guadalupe.

City of Mexico, Sept. 5.—The question of the reality of the apparition of the Virgin of Guadalupe is being fiercely discussed. In consequence of his expressed disbelief Eduardo Sanchez Camacho, bishop of Tamaulipas, has been forced to resign, but Catholics in his state are largely supporting him. The Vatican has been telegraphed regarding the matter, and it is feared the consequences of the division in the church may be serious.

In consequence of the poor attendance, the Pan-American congress has been permanently dissolved.
